New Anodizing Plant Opens Here

International Anodizing Corp. has announced opening of a new facility in Torrance. The plant, located at 1840 Oak St., is for straight-line, continuous pre-anodizing of coil aluminum.

The new facility is the second plant to go into operation in the United States. A plant is located at Schiller Park, Ill., and European plants are located in Belgium and Italy.

The plant has the world's largest capacity for the production of anodized aluminum coil, according to Malcolm Smith, president of International Anodizing of California. It is 275 feet long, fully automated, and can handle coils up to 50 inches in width.

It also has the ability to anodize only one side of the aluminum sheet, an exclusive feature which, Smith said, assures production economies and solves many welding problems.

Anodizing is a process of treating or finishing aluminum. It protects the metal and helps it to retain its original luster. Anodizing resists corrosion, salt, and acids and eliminates smudging and dulling, Smith explained. The process also makes possible fresh colors and "satin smoothness," Smith said.

The Torrance plant anodizes the aluminum before the coil is formed, stamped, drawn, or otherwise fabricated, Smith said.

If you have not sprayed your lawn lately with a good insecticide, you may be noticing little brown moths flying low over your grass about dusk.

That little moth is most likely the adult laying eggs for a new crop of sod webworms.

About 10 days after you notice these moths is the proper time to attack. If you have bought a chinch bug spray as a cutworm kill previously for other pests, you may use either now for the sod webworms.

If not, I prefer a copper ether product for this purpose. This product is not poisonous to any birds that may eat the worms later and it also fumigates the lawn letting it get a fresh start for the hot dry days ahead.

Millions Unclaimed

Want to Wear That Medal You Earned?

Millions of unclaimed medals earned by servicemen during World War II and the Korean War are stacked in warehouses around the country, according to Commander Thomas Zahnle of the Lomita Post 1622 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Army alone reports it has more than 800,000 pounds of medals stuffed in a Philadelphia warehouse, Zahnle said. Among them are some 1.5 million victory medals, a decoration earned by almost every person who served in World War II.

Zahnle said the services were not particularly concerned about the medals, but that surprise was expressed at the lack of interest in claiming the awards.

Veterans can claim medals due them by writing to the branch of the service in which they served, giving complete information about the dates, units, and identification numbers of their service.

Letters should be directed to the following addresses:

- Army—The Adjutant General, Decorations and Awards Branch, Department of the Army, Washington 25, D. C.

- Air Force—Director of Military Personnel, Attention: Awards Branch, Headquarters, U. S. Air Force, Washington, D.C.

- Marine Corps—Commandant, Headquarters, U. S. Marine Corps, Washington 25, D. C.

- Coast Guard—Commandant (PMM), U.S. Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington 25, D.C.
